AT THE MOVIES

Memorial Theater 448-2297 • CLOSED Monday and Tuesday

Today, 7 p.m., Saturday, 2 p.m.

How to eat fried worms – Mitch Forrester and his wife Helen have packed their boys into the family station wagon and are heading to a new town with a new job for Mitch and a new elementary school for their son Billy. It seems to Billy that everybody else, including his little brother Woody, easily adapts to the new surroundings. Billy's fears are realized in his first moments at the new school when the old adage-everybody picks on the new kid appears to be true. Everybody except the tall, lanky girl named Erika Tanzy whose kindness simultaneously inspires gratefulness and humiliation in Billy. Starring Luke Benward and Adam Hicks. Rated PG for mild bullying and some crude humor.

Saturday, 7 p.m.

Accepted – High school senior Bartleby

"B" Gaines is on his way to scoring eight out of eight rejection letters from colleges, which isn't going to go over big with Mom and Dad. At least he's not alone in the exclusion. Several of his crew of outcast friends are in the same, college-less boat. So how does a guy facing a bleak career please his parents and get noticed by dream girl Monica? Simple. Open his own university. B and his band of misfit freshmen take "liberal" arts literally when they fool their parents and peers and create the esteemed South Harmon Institute of Technology. Starring Justin Long and Blake Lively. Rated PG-13 for language, sexual material and drug content.

Sunday, 7 p.m.

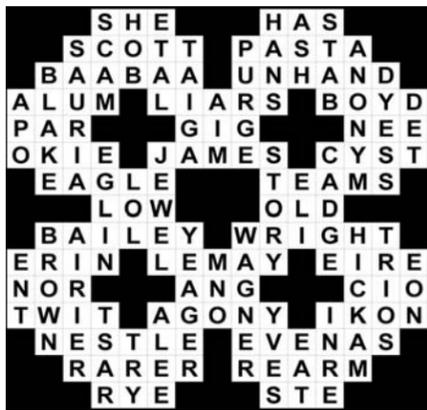

Beerfest – When American brothers Todd and Jan Wolfhouse travel to Germany to spread their grandfather's ashes at the Oktoberfest, they stumble upon a super-secret, centuries old, underground beer games competition - beerfest the secret Olympics of beer drinking. The brothers receive a less than warm welcome from their German cousins, the Von Wolfhausens, who humiliate Todd and Jan, slander their relatives and finally cast them out of the event. Starring Paul Soter, Erik Stolhanske. Rated R for pervasive crude and sexual content, language, nudity and substance abuse.

Volleyball: Chiefs whomp Eagles twice

By Kirsten Tacker

Rounding out Hickam's sports day, in a fun competition of teamwork, the Chiefs beat the Eagles 25-18 in a 25-point rally match in volleyball, Sept. 22.

In a rally match, a point is scored each time the ball hits the ground, regardless of which team served the ball.

They were supposed to only play one game, but the eagles wanted more. The chiefs gave them what they asked for and won again, 25-21.

"This was a great game," said Jason Yee, Eagles. "The game was between the senior enlisted, who are the Chiefs against the senior officers, the Eagles."

All in good fun according to the Eagles, the Chiefs started trash talking even before the game began.

When James McGahey, Chiefs, was asked whether the game rules were strict volleyball, he replied, "No, we have to give the Eagles a chance."

The Chiefs started the match with the sun glaring in their eyes. It didn't seem to hamper their ability to rack up points.

Neither team played the game attempting to overpower the opponent by spiking them. Both played a smart game of finding the opponents holes, and placing the ball strategically in the hole for a point.

Initially, D.J. Dibibar, Chiefs, brought some energy to the game with his overhand serve.

Then the Chiefs supplied a laugh amongst the competition, when Mike Holgate went for a spike, but instead the ball bounced off of his teammate Bryn LePine's head not quite making it over the net.

"That is our bank shot, we are still working on it," commented Holgate.

In the second half of the game the Eagles made a slow and steady upward path, producing some good digs to close the gap in points. They made a strong effort to catch up with the Chiefs, but not enough for the win.

"It felt terrific to win," said Dibibar. "Even though later in the game I started failing with my over hand serve."

"Winning doesn't matter, as long as they lost," interjected McGahey.

After the game, J.J. Torres, Eagles, made a few announcements before the awards ceremony.

"Despite the fact that the Chiefs cheated on us, this is a great event," Torres said jokingly. "It was a good spirited competition. We came together as a team, realizing individual and team achievement. That is what we do here everyday doing the mission."

He thanked the sponsors and the performers for the day.

"I can't help, but put a shout out for all the security forces that are out here in force, keeping us safe," said Torres. "I appreciate all of that. The other thing is we couldn't do sport's day without the volunteers from the different units, from everybody that helped us set up to the fitness staff. The fitness center staff are the ones that put this event together."

"I really love these events," he concluded. "I am glad everybody came out here to participate. It's okay even though (the Eagles) didn't do well. That means we have nowhere to go, but up. Everybody is number one after the season is over."

When Steven Groenheim, Eagles, was asked if he had any tips for next years match, he replied, "Permanent change of stations are in order for the chief's group."

Jeffrey Stephenson, Eagles, knocks the ball over the net during the Chiefs vs. Eagles volleyball game, part of sports day festivities, Sept. 22 at Hickam Harbor.
